

There is a +12V power plane on the top layer. The Power, Contactor, Strobe Light, Fans, and Sensor Board Circuitry/Interfaces requires larger traces for the current so a power plane is used instead. The CAN bus is isolated so that's why a keepout zone is placed but to keep the aesthetics and functionality at a balance, the bridge between the strobe light and contactor is at the required thickness for the current draw.

